STATE DEPARTMENT
DENIES HAITI REPORT

Department press officer, said the investigation was continuing, with the possibility of prosecution of the persons involved.

Special to The New York Times
WASHINGTON, Dec. 28—The State Department said today it had not requested that law enforcement agencies drop a case involving the alleged smuggling of two surplus T-28 warplanes from the United States to Haiti.

Robert J. McCloskey, State

Department press officer, said the investigation was continuing, with the possibility of prosecution of the persons involved.

Mr. McCloskey was commenting on reports, including one in the State Department was not challenging the substance of the report but only the suggestion that the department had intervened to stop the prosecution. The department's statement did not requested that law enforcement agencies for fear it would expose the Robert J. McCloskey, State