U.S. Defector in Moscow Is Pictured as a Paranoid in Wife's Testimony in Florida Divorce Case

By PETER GROSE

Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, Dec. 4-Last October the Soviet Union announced the defection of an American named John Discoe Smith, identifying him as a disillussioned agent of the Central Intelligence Agency.

Articles by and about him began o appear in the Soviet Press. Reporting details of alleged United States espionage activities.

The United States Govern-ment issued routine denials that Mr. Smith had been a C.I.A. agent; the State Department dismissed his accounts of assas-sinations and a military plot to overthrow the overnment of India. A spokesman called the stories "fatuous allegations."

Reminiscences of old friends Reminiscences of old friends and evidence in court records indicate that Mr. Smith, who is from Quincy, Mass., is a confused and troubled man who grew suspicious of wife and family and everything American life had to offer.

His storm as pieced

His story, as pieced together from Soviet and United States evidence, is one of personal tragedy, not of high

Fixed Code Machines

"He was really a clean-cut American boy, though I hate to sound trite," said one friend who had known him in the United States Embassy in New Delhi 10 years ago. "He was a nice guy around the place. No interest in politics at all." State Department files show that he was a Foreign Service employe, a communications technician, until early in employe, a communica-tions technician, until early in

He used to fix all the gadgest, the code machines and that sort of thing." This friend, a career diplomat, said. "He might have seen occasional messages as he worked on the machines, but he cer-tainly had no regular access to what the diplomatic traffic was all about, nor did he seem particularly interested."

Mr. Smith left his wife and disappeared from his familiar surroundings in the summer of that they were out to get him, 1960. He had been asked to Mrs. Smith told the court. "H resign from the Foreign Service after a government psychiatrist had declared him a paranoid with all-consuming suspicions.

His last known address, dating from 1961, was "care of American Express, Rome."

The Russians say he traveled the world—Australia, South Af-

John Discoe Smith in a photo cabled from Moscow last month and, right, identity card

fica and elsewhere—pe-fore finding a home in Mos-cow. He has now become a Soviet citizen, they say. They have not disclosed exactly when he reached the Soviet Union.

Court Records Found

Why did he defect? Part of the answer is contained in the records of the Pinellas County circuit Court at clearwater, Fla., in September, 1961, Mary London Smith obtained a divorce, uncontested, from Mr. vorce, Smith.

Just before their legal separa-Just before their legal separation 16 months earlier, Mrs. Smith told the court, he was studying to become a Roman Catholic. He was a Mason; he spoke of joining the fraternal order of the Knights of Pythias. Mrs. Smith said he had confided the philosophy to her

Mrs. Smith said he had confided the philosophy to her "that you had to join these great big organizations, even if they were in opposition to each other, just in order to be in with all the big people, you see, so you couldn't be attacked by anyone."

"The Masons would protect him, and the Catholics would protect him," she said, interpreting what he had told her. The same divorce proceedings point to the origin of the charges that Mr. Smith is now aking in the Soviet press.

aking in the Soviet press. "He had the impression that everybody was working for the Central Intelligence Agency,

Mr. Smith and Mary London Foreign Service.

Were married in New Delhi on May 28, 1955. She was a secretary in the political section of the Embassy, he traveled through South Asia for the United States Government, of their home soon afterward maintaining and installing and ins maintaining and installing communications equipment, includ- gan.

ing code machines.

They were a popular couple at Embassy parties in the early years, living in an American compound for embassy staff, called "The Taj." They had one called "The Taj." They had one child, Ellen, born in December, 1956.

Starting the next year, Mrs. Smith said, he started drinking heavily and accusing her of being a spy.

The Soviet account of his experiences published in Izyan experiences, published in Izvestia last month, puts the admitted change in his outlook in a different light.

"All his being, which was honest and healthy on the whole, rose up in revolt against the dirty work, the meanness"

Since account of his exit. Since account pionage officials attempt ernment leged We erations.

thought that I was in their and the false life of most of thought that I was in their secret employ, that I was reporting on him constantly. He thought I was drugging his food, and he also thought that at cocktail parties I paid other people to do it."

In his recent statements in Moscow Mr. Smith called his wife a "regular employe" of the C.I.A.

In response to a question of the most of acquaintances." Iszestia said. Mr. and Mrs. Smith were transferred from India to the transferred from India to the United States Embassy in Vienna in November, 1959. A few weeks later, according to Mrs. Smith's testimony, they were ordered back to the United States on the advice of the embassy's consulting psychiatrist.

"He told me that Iohn was in their acquaintances." Iszestia said. Mr. and Mrs. Smith were transferred from India to the United States Embassy in Vienna in November, 1959. A few weeks later, according to Mrs. Smith's testimony, they were ordered back to the United States on the advice of the embassy's consulting psychia-trist.

"In response to a question of the company of the C.I.A."

"He told me that Iohn was in their portion of the company trist.
"He told me that John was

In response to a question from the Florida judge six years ago — "have you ever been a member of the C. I. A.? haven't."

"He told me that John was in an acute stage of paranoia, that I should take him home," home, makes to resign from the was asked to resign from the foreign Service.

Government, of their home soon afterward and separation proceedings be-

> Only when the Russians began publishing Mr. Smith's ac-count did Mrs. Smith and her parents learn what had become of him.

United States officials be-United States officials believe that Mr. Smith's account is a Soviet reply to the publicity given to the recent defection in West Germany of a Soviet intelligence officer, Lieut. Col. Yevgeny Y. Runge.
Since most of Mr. Smith's account deals with alleged espionage activity in India, these officials also see it as a Soviet attempt to set the Indian Government on guard against al-ernment on guard against al-leged Western intelligence op-