WASHINGTON, Nov. 30 — Two top White House aides conveyed to President Nixon today a "feeling" they had gained during a Latin-American trip this month that the Socialist Government of President Salvador Allende Gossens in Chile "won't last long."

Herbert G. Klein, the White House Director of Communications, told reporters here that he and Robert H. Finch, a counselor to the President, had obtained this "feeling" about the Allende Government's future in conversations in the course of a two-week visit to six Latin-American countries. Chile was not among them.

Mr. Klein said that although the goodwill mission, which was headed by Mr. Finch, had "no direct knowledge of the Chilean situation, its members' impressions concerning the fate of Dr. Allende "will be part of the report" they will make to President Nixon.

It is unusual for senior Administration officials to discuss publicly the possibility of the overthrow of a foreign Government with which the United States maintains correct relations, even if major controversies exist, as is the case of Chile.

Other American officials, who asked not to be named, said after hearing of Mr. Klein's remarks that this was likely to exacerbate Chilean-American frictions even further.

A preliminary report on the Latin-American trip was presented to Mr. Nixon later in the morning when Mr. Finch and Mr. Klein met with the President and Henry A. Kissinger, the President's Special Assistant for National Security Affairs.

The State Department's views on the Finch report and its section on Chile could not be learned. The Assistant Secretary of State for Inter-American Affairs, Charles A. Meyer, was not present at the White House meeting, although he was a member of the mission, which went to Argentina, Brazil, Peru, Ecuador, Honduras and Mexico.

Mr. Meyer's office had no comment on Mr. Klein's remarks about the Allende Government. It is known, however, that the State Department does not consider the Allende Government to be in political difficulties serious enough to threaten its survival.

As of 1 Dec, Fidel Castro had been in Chile for about three weeks.
