40 Newsmen Reported Serving As Secret C.I.A. Informants

The Washington Star-News

abroad on its payroll as under-cover informants, some of general circulation news orthem as full-time agents.

rector of Central Intelligence, ordered a review of the practice two months of the practices the the practical through the practices the practices the practices the practic some 40 full-time reporters, but it is understood that none free-lance journalists and correspondents for trade publications in their files. tions in their files as regular regular staff correspondents of plied information to agents in pers with regular overseas buthe field and who are regularly reaus. paid for their services.

group were free-lance magazine writers, part-time "stringers" for newspapers, news magazines and news services, and itinerant authors. Eight Continued on Page 40, Column 3

WASHINGTON, Nov. 30 — others are writers for small, The Central Intelligence Agen-limited circulation specialty cy has about three dozen publications, the sources said, American journalists working and no more than five are fullganizations who function as After William E. Colby, Di-undercover contacts for the tice two months ago, agency Sources refused to identify officials found the names of any of the reporters involved, but it is understood that name Sources refused to identify undercover contacts who sup- major American daily newspa-

The use of foreign corre-Sources said that 25 of the been suspected for years by 3 Dozen American Journalists Are Said to Do Work for C.I.A.

Continued From Page 1, Col. 8 States citizens.

now. The facts were made known by an authoritative ractice and its wide scope, stensions of the 1950's, was apparently a surprise even to Mr. Colby, who last month or-Mr. Colby, who last month ordered a significant cutback in the C.I.A. relationship with journalists connected with major news organizations. jor news organizations.

seriously compromise the integrity of the American pressing general and possibly cripple its ability to function overseas. This small group, the full-time staff correspondents with general circulation news organizations is to be phased out tions, is to be phased out.

It is understood that three

It is understood that three of these agents have maintained their C.I.A. contacts without the knowledge of the news organizations involved ... but that the agency side-line of two others is known to their civilian employers.

Mr. Colby has approved exas free-lance magazine writers, signment overseas for The Star-"stringers" for newspapers, News.

news-magazines and news servStar-News editors have disstringer is a journalist, usually of Leary and other sources and self-employed, who offers news have found no evidence to sugdispatches on a piece-work gest that either he or this newsbasis to news organizations paper has been compromised.

that do not have regular staff members in the stringer's city.)
Agents in this category are not regularly identified with any single publication, and most of them are full-time informants who frankly use their writing or reporting as a cover for their presence in a foreign city. Most of them are United with the C.I.A.

Most are paid directly and regularly for services rendered, an authoritative but a few of these semi-inde-The continuing extent of the casionally draw on C.I.A. funds which is believed to have been socied down since the cold war. scaled down since the cold war had an interest or for entertain ing a useful contact.

A second group of overseas Jor news organizations.

Some Being Phased Out
No longer to remain on the agency payroll is the one category of journalist-agents whose continued existence could most seriously compromise the in-their employers.

> many reporters working at home and abroad and editors who for their part maintain regular contact with the C.I.A. officials in the routine performance of their journalistic duties. No money changes hands under these relationships these relationships.

In such a relationship, the reporter is free to use the infortheir civilian employers.

Mr. Colby has approved explicitly the continued maintenance of more than 30 other C.I.A. agents abroad who are not strictly newsmen but who rely on some kind of journalistic "cover" for their intelligence operations.

"Stringers' to Continue

Among those to be maintained is by far the largest category of journalist-agents: a group consisting of about 25 operatives scattered across the globe who appear to the world as free-lance magazine writers. In this group, sources indicated, the C.I.A. includes a Star-News reporter, Jeremiah O'Leary, whose name apparently found its way into agency files as a result of contacts of this group writers.