

Ex-CIA Agent Told To Leave Holland

The Hague, Netherlands

Former CIA agent Philip Agee must leave the Netherlands because he is a danger to public order and national security, the Justice Ministry said yesterday.

Agee, author of a controversial book detailing CIA activities, settled in Amsterdam in June after being expelled by Britain as a security risk. He was given a temporary resident's permit which expired last Wednesday, and Dutch authorities have told him it will not be renewed.

The 41-year-old ex-agent was allowed into the country on condition that he refrain from all political activities. The Justice Ministry said, without elaborating, that he had failed to meet this condition by pursuing articles and interviews of a political nature.
