CIA suit

2/19/78

Today's Washington Post carries a UPI story headed "CIA Able to Control Minds By Hypnosis, Data Shows."

According to the story these CIA records were obtained under FOIA by Science Trends, a newsletter, which made the records available to UPI.

There is no doubt at all that this information is within my prior requests of the CIA, one in particular on which it just stopped sending me copies of records ~~ix~~ it did make available to others.

By prior I mean by about two years.

This story represents the second recent CIA release to another of what I had requested and had not been provided.

This particular story represents information in which I have aded interests, special interests aside from the general interest represented in the requests.

Its release follows my complaint/appeal to CIA over the previous one. It therefore is not accidental.

One of these special interests was prompted by the novel The Billiken Courier. Another is the prior experience, theories and present interests of my source Mike.

The novel claims that its postulate about hypnosis is based upon an actual case in which the subject of hypnosis was induced to do what he ordinarily would not have done. It is a Copenhagen case. Recollection was triggered by display of the billiken (approx.- my copy of the novel was borrowed and not returned.) in the part of the novel of interest to me.

What this story does not go into is that if a woman can be persuaded to shoot an associate for no good reason when she is under hypnosis it is apparent that anyone can be induced to assassinate under hypnosis.

The Warren Commission had such an interest. I obtained this record years ago. In it, it now is clearly apparent, the CIA did not tell the Commission what it knew. These released records relate to experiments of the period 1951-1954.

The Central Intelligence Agency shook the theory that "nice" people cannot be made immoral under hypnosis by getting one woman to act out a cold-blooded murder in 1951, according to declassified intelligence documents.

The Cold War-era mind control experiment climaxed when the hypnotized woman, described as peaceable and terrified of guns, fired a pistol point blank at a sleeping colleague—not knowing the gun had been unloaded.

The documents also described other experiments in hypnosis—always involving female subjects for reasons not stated—in which women were persuaded to simulate immoral, abnormal or disloyal behavior.

One report concluded:

"If it can be shown in a series of tests that our subjects will do things that they normally would not do in their everyday activities, it seems logical that individuals elsewhere can be also controlled thusly."

The once-secret documents were obtained by the weekly Washington newsletter Science Trends under the Freedom of Information Act, and made available to United Press International.

They described CIA-sponsored hypnosis experiments carried out from 1951 to 1954, when the agency was starting up its ultra-secret "Project MK-Ultra" research into mind and behavior control using witting and unwitting humans.

MK-Ultra ran into the 1960s, spurred initially by Korean War-era fears that the Soviets and Chinese had a big lead in "brainwashing" techniques that might enable them to induce confessions from any captured enemy and turn Western spies into helpless, obedient double-agents.

Nanes of subjects were blanked out in the released documents, but all were described as young, well-educated, highly motivated women who worked for the CIA and apparently volunteered for the experiments.

The simulated murder was described in a report dated Feb. 10, 1954, concerning a male hypnotist and a woman "who had expressed a fear of firearms in any fashion."

It said she was put in a trance and told to awaken another woman who had been put into a deep sleep.

When she could not awaken her colleague, the report said, she was ordered to "pick up a pistol nearby and fire it at Miss (blank)" and assured that "her rage would be so great that she would not hesitate to 'kill.'"

It said the woman "carried out these suggestions to the letter, including firing the (unloaded) gun at Miss (blank), then proceeding to fall into a deep sleep" as ordered.

When awakened, neither the "murderer" nor her "victim" had any recollection of what had happened, the document said. It added:

"The 'murderer' refused to pick up or accept the same gun and absolutely denied that she had ever fired it."
