The American Telephone and Telegraph Company said yesterday that it monitored millions of long-distance calls between 1965 and 1970 as part of a campaign to stop cheating on toll charges.

"I don't think we did anything illegal," said a spokes man, William Mullane, about the voice recordings, first reported by The St. Louis Post-

Dispatch.

'We believe that what we did was necessary to protect the integrity of our network and to keep people from cheating," he said.

Mr. Mullane said that some calls originating in New York, Los Angeles, Detroit, Miami, St. Louis and Newark had been monitored but that he could not confirm the newspaper's figure of 1.5 million calls recorded and sent here for analysis.

He said, however, that about 500 fraudulent calls were dis-Continued on Page 39, Column 1

"Obviously we can't just say how the box worked or everyone would go out and make their own," he said.

90-Second Segments

To check, he said, the company made its random samplings and recorded 90-second segments of calls that appeared to be going through a "blue box." These were sent to fraud specialists.

Mr. Mullane added that the policy of intercepting payment-evading calls had "been upheld in the courts. Such calls are illegal and since calls are our only property we have the right to intercept them."
