Andrews told the Warren Commission that, the day following the assassination, he received a telephone call from a man named Clay Bertrand asking him to delend Oswald, who was arrested in Dallas.

Garrison's investigation produced Perry R. Russo, a witness who says that Clay L. Shaw, former managing director of International Trade Mart, met with David Ferrie and Lee Orleans Parish Grand Jury indictment for perjury in the case, has said he is unable to say whether Clay Shaw and Clay Bertrand are one and the same.

Lane said that in March, 1966, he was in New Orleans to film an interview with Andrews for the documentary. When he visited Andrews' office, Lane said, Andrews said he would be unable to appear.

"He said he had received a telephone call from someone in Washington and the caller told him that if he gave out the interview he would end up with a hole in his head," said Lane of his conversation with Andrews.

Lane's book, in both cloth-bound and paperback, has now sold more than 900,000 copies. His documentary movie with the same title as his book has its United States premiere here Thursday at several neighborhood theaters.

Lane said his visit to New Orleans to address the Young Men's Business Club Thursday at 1 p. m. in the Roosevelt Hotel coincided with the premiere as well as his plans to confer at length with Garrison on the case.

Lane, who has received much criticism for his outspoken views on the Warren Report and the Warren Commission, said the report "is the single most important obstacle for finding out who killed President Kennedv."

He said it has convinced the American people of something "which was untrue"; and he charged the Commission with a conspiracy to stop all rumors, so no shadow would be cast on the President or any one else but Oswald.

Lane said that he and Garrison, working from two different directions, reached the same conclusions in the case.

Lane said that, because of Garrison's limited jurisdiction tee. in Orleans Parish, he will not be able to prosecute all persons involved.

Asked if he thinks Marina Oswald, Oswald's widow, may be subpenaed, Lane said he did not believe it would be within Garrison's power, adding he wished it were "because I'd like to see Marina Oswald face cross-examination for the first time."

He tagged Garrison "the most important man in this country," and said "The Establishment" in America knows "Garrison has something that is very damaging."

Regarding the number of shots fired, Lane said the Warren Commission says three were fired: one that hit Kennedy in the back then went through Gov. Connally; a second that missed, and a third that hit Kennedy's head.

Lane maintains that one shot hit Kennedy in the back and was later worked free when Kennedy was given heart maissage; that a second shot fired from the front of the motorcade hit Kennedy in the throat; that a third shot hit Connally; that a fourth shot was fired wild, striking a curbing, resulting in a wound to the face of James T. Tague, and the fifth, fired from the front, which hit Keilnedy on the right side of his head. Lane also displayed movie frame enlargements of the assassination, with one sequence covering a half-second period showing Kenneay being hit and the force of the shot causing his body to move backward and to the left.

He said that, because of her position at the time, Mrs. Kennedy would have also been hit if the last shot had been fired from above and to the rear. The movie frame at the time 5
