The Major Events of the Day

International

At a news conference at the State Department yesterday, Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger accused the House Select Committee on Intelligence of practicing "a new form of McCarthyism" by producing a leaked report that was "so distorted" that it amounted to "a malicious lie." [Page 1, Columns 1-2.]

According to reports reaching Lusaka, Zambia, the Western-supported Angolan nationalist forces have decided to give up the major towns they still hold and prepare for guerrilla warfare. The orders to withdraw, it was said, was given by the high command of the National Union for the Total Independence of Angola after its members had decided that conventional warfare was no longer possible against the advancing forces of the Soviet-supplied Popular Movement for the Liberation of Angola and its Cuban allies. [1:3.]

A wallposter campaign against Deputy Prime Minister Teng Hsiao-ping has started at Peking University and there were other signs of increasing strain within the Chinese leadership. Foreigners who visited the campus said that posters clearly alluding to Mr. Teng accused of him being a "capitalist roader"—the term used for Chairman Mao. The Teng's enemies during the Cultural Revolution of the 1960's. [1:1-2.]

National

A national survey conducted by The New York Times and CBS News has found that the personalities that the candidates for President have projected appear to be a much more important source of support among potential voters than the stands they have taken on major issues. The issues that generate the largest majorities pro or con are abortion, busing and proposals that the Government provide jobs for all and transfer its social programs to the states. [1:5-6.]

President Ford, fulfilling a campaign pledge, made public his personal finances. The details of Mr. and Mrs. Ford's financial affairs, dating to 1966, disclosed that Mr. Ford's personal financial worth at the time he became President increased by about $67,000 to $323,489 at the end of 1975. The documents also disclosed that $106,200 of Mr. Ford's $250,000 salary and expense at

Metropolitan
Governor Carey appointed Arthur B. Krim, a leading Democratic fund-raiser for the national and state party, to replace Patrick J. Cunningham as the New York party's representative primarily responsible for preparing for the Democratic National Convention here. Mr. Carey said he had made the change because of "the obvious circumstances surrounding the legal matters Mr. Cunningham is involved in and indeed the situation which involves the Governor."
This was a reference to Maurice H. Nadjar's investigation of the alleged sale of judgeships in the Bronx. Mr. Cunningham remains both the state and Bronx County party chairman. [1:8.]

A federally ordered evaluation of the office of the special state anticorruption prosecutor, Maurice H. Nadjar, was quietly canceled last month after Mr. Nadjar relinquished the power to veto some staff appointments and objected to the involvement of a state agency in arranging the study. He said the evaluation might interfere with his investigations. [1:7.]

Quotation of the Day

"Even when documents in themselves are correct, they are taken so out of context and they are so fitted into a preconceived pattern that we are facing here a new version of McCarthyism."—Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, complaining of leaks by the House Select Committee on Intelligence. [1:2.]

Corrections

A caption for a photograph that appeared in The New York Times yesterday erroneously stated that Queen Juliana and Prince Bernhard were appearing in public in Amsterdam on Wednesday. The Associated Press, which supplied the information on which the caption was based, said that the photograph actually was taken May 25, 1974.

Because of an error in transmission, an article in some editions of The Times Tuesday misquoted Robert M. Krughoff, president of an organization that is sponsoring a new consumer magazine. Mr. Krughoff said that the magazine might save a consumer "hundreds or thousands" of dollars, not "hundreds of thousands."
