The Major Events of the Day

International

The vanguard of a "symbolic" peace-keeping force—100 Sudanese troops—that the Arab League had said it would send to Lebanon arrived at Beirut's airport yesterday, and Algerian troops were said to have been on their way overland from Syria. Fighting in Beirut and elsewhere in the country died down. [Page A1, Column 1.]

The Syrian Government announced that it was obliged to take "urgent and appropriate measures" to counter a reported building of Iraqi military forces near the Syrian-Iraqi border. The Iraqi soldiers, the Government said, were hurting the efforts of Syria and other Arab nations to stop the war in Lebanon. There were unconfirmed reports in Damascus that Syria had flown troops toward the Iraqi border. [A1:2-3.]

Alan Greenspan, the Ford Administration's top economist, told Congress that the general economy this year—productive growth, unemployment, the inflation rate—would probably be better than was forecast at the beginning of the year. He said revisions of the official forecast were not complete, but he gave some tentative estimates, including a decline in the unemployment rate below 7 percent by the end of the year. The rate was 7.3 percent in May. [A1:6-7.]

Officials of the National Council on Alcoholism attacked a Rand Corporation study suggesting that some alcoholics could resume "normal" drinking. They said that the report was "dangerous and misleading" and should not have been made public. But the officials said they had not seen a copy or read any part of the report. A Rand spokesman said that the report had been "very carefully" reviewed by experts, and that it would have been "absurd" to withhold publication. [A1:4-6.]

A former Congressional secretary said she was paid a premium salary by Representative John Young, Democrat of Texas, for sexual favors in addition to her assigned work. The woman, 30-year-old Colleen Gardner, said Mr. Young had paid her more than $20,000 a year for more than two years, but did not give her responsibilities commensurate with her salary. Mr. Young, 59 years old, has served 10 terms in Congress and is a member of the House Rules Com-

The State Senator's Republican leadership made a major political concession to Democratic opponents by accepting most of the City University's rescue plan passed by the Assembly Wednesday night. Action on the compromise measure in both houses is expected today. Its enactment could reopen the university on Monday. [A1:8.]

The State Assembly gave final approval to a controversial but still widely supported bill designed to reduce street solicitation by prostitutes by outlawing "loitering for purposes of prostitution." The bill has been opposed by civil libertarians who have said they would challenge it as unconstitutional when it is signed into law by Governor Carey, as is expected. [1:5.]

One of Maurice H. Nadari's most important cases had another setback by the State Court of Appeals, which ruled that Thomas J. Mackell, the former Queens District Attorney, could not be tried again by the special state anticorruption prosecutor on charges that he had blocked the prosecution of a "get-rich-quick scheme." [A1:4.]

Daniel P. Moynihan, former United States representative at the United Nations, announced that he would be a candidate for the Senate seat of James L. Buckley, the Conservative-Republican of New York, joining five others who are seeking to run against Mr. Buckley. At a news conference, Mr. Moynihan cited his support among labor organizations and justified his statement "dishonorable" for him to seek political office. [A1:5.]

Quotation of the Day

"My concern is that a lot of people will try to drink again, and a lot of people will die as a result."—Dr. Nicholas A. Pace, criticizing a study that said some alcoholics could return to moderate drinking. [A1:4.]
