

24 Sep 72

Possibly SF Chronicle or SF Examiner;* possibly some other paper; person who clipped the item does not remember where she saw it.
She did, however, note the date.

WASHINGTON — Federal Reserve
Board chairman Arthur Burns' wife, a neighbor of Martha Mitchell's at the other end of the seventh floor corridor in the Watergate, took her a plate of homemade cookies before Mrs. Mitchell left Washington and also invited her to view a treasured new painting bought abroad this summer.

"I like this one better," said Martha with a characteristic bluntness that didn't offend Mrs. Burns because her husband, who has just taken up Sunday painting, was the artist.

After the second installment made headlines last week, there is a funny postscript to Mrs. Mitchell's charges that she was manhandled in California and stuck "in the bottom" with a hypodermic. The Newport Beach doctor who was called to give her the sedative injection during the incident says he was so distraught over his experience with her that he didn't even send a bill . . .

See Washington Star-News
12, 13 Sep 72.

*If this is from a San Francisco paper, it would be the SF Sunday Examiner & Chronicle, since 24 Sep was a Sunday. Sender thinks it appeared on society page.