

Wash Star-News 12/12/72

New Watergate Dimension?

By THOMAS B. ROSS
Chief, Staff, Senate

A fake passport produced by the Central Intelligence Agency for former White House consultant Howard Hunt Jr. was being carried by one of the break-in men of the White House on the night of the break-in, according to a source familiar with the case.

The source said the passport was for a man named "John G. Baker" and was issued by the CIA in the name of a man named "John G. Baker."

The source said the passport was issued to a man named "John G. Baker" and was issued by the CIA in the name of a man named "John G. Baker."

Hunt's wife was taken into custody on Friday. Her passport was found in the car in which she was taken into custody.

The source said the passport was issued to a man named "John G. Baker" and was issued by the CIA in the name of a man named "John G. Baker."

Defenses Pushes For Subpoena in Watergate Case

The defense in the Watergate bugging and break-in case is pressing its attempt to subpoena from The Los Angeles Times records of an interview with an admitted participant in the incident.

In papers filed yesterday in U.S. District Court here, an attorney for defendant Howard Hunt Jr. claims that the newspaper has the only known records of an interview two of its reporters had with Alfred C. Baldwin, an ex-FBI agent who is expected to testify for the government in the trial, and that a recent Supreme Court ruling requiring newsmen to testify before grand juries makes it clear that the newspaper must produce the records.

But the two men had an early falling out. Hunt was sent over to the CIA and the company in Miami. He was once arrested on a boat off British Honduras in what he described as a "suspicious" encounter with the CIA.

A soldier of fortune, he is believed to have been several years ago, besides that of Edward Hamilton. He was born in the town of Norfolk, Va., but adopted the name of his stepfather.

Hunt was listed as a White House consultant by Charles L. Baker, special counsel to President Nixon. He openly admitted his "Who's Who" list of names associated under a number of pseudonyms — Robert W. Jones, John Baxter and John Davis.

He was indicted on charges that he had present in the name of the Watergate break-in, but not before the police arrived and apprehended the five persons inside the Democratic headquarters. He was linked to the case through a $25,000 cash fund, a campaign contribution to the Committee for the Re-election of the President.

Investigators said the fake passport and the possible CIA role in the break-in would probably be explored at the trial scheduled to begin next month.

The CIA is prohibited by law from conducting any operations within the United States and, of course, is proscribed from taking part in domestic politics. It is known, however, to have been involved with the Cuban community and with other anti-Communist exile groups in U.S. cities.

The investigators said they did not have a plausible theory as to why Mrs. Hunt was carrying so much cash.

a former FBI informant. In Howard Hunt Jr. claims that the newspaper has the only known records of an interview two of its reporters had with Alfred C. Baldwin, an ex-FBI agent who is expected to testify for the government in the trial, and that a recent Supreme Court ruling requiring newsmen to testify before grand juries makes it clear that the newspaper must produce the records.