Mrs. Katharine Graham, publisher of The Washington Post, and Senator Sam. J. Ervin Jr., Democrat of North Carolina, were cited yesterday for "distinguished contributions to the mass media" by the First National Symposium on Crime and the Media, The Associated Press reported.

The symposium, sponsored by the City University's John Jay College of Criminal Justice, will meet May 31 and June 1 here to "explore the interaction of crime and newspapers, magazines, radio and television, at this time when that interaction has been climaxed in world-shaking action."
