To the Editor:

John Dean's account of the President's annoyance at seeing an anti-war picket outside the White House recalls the picketing in front of the Association of the Bar of the City of New York on 44th Street ten years ago when Chief Justice Earl Warren was given honorary membership in the association. The signs called him a Communist and they were vitually pushed in his face as he alighted from his car. When he addressed the audience the Chief Justice, in referring to the pickets, said: "Thank God that this can go on in our country."
