Mansfield Terms Nixon Impeachment 'Debatable'

Special to The New York Times

Special to The New York Times WASHINGTON, July 10 — Mike Mansfield, the Senate majority leader, said today it was "debatable" whether Presi-dent Nixon could be impeached for not knowing of the role of his staff in the Watergate affair, even if he had no per-sonal knowledge of the break-in. in.

However, in response to а reporter's question whether the President's ignorance was "in itself an incident of his com-petence," Senator Mansfield said, "Yes, he should have known."

The Montana Democrat said at a breakfast meting with re-porters that he personally be-lieved the President's public statement denying personal in-volvement in the Watergate affair. affair.

"I think we ought to take him at his word, if we take the law to be innocent until proven guilty," he said. "That applies to a President as well as to a pipe fitter."

Sees Powr Weakened

Sees Powr Weakened But the Senator added that Mr. Nixon's power may be weakened by his policies as wel as by the accusations made against him in the Water-gate hearings. "If he's been crippled," Mr. Mansfield said of the President, "it's because of his own policies, and to some extent because of the ap-pearance of the facts [in the Watergate hearings] rather than by the facts to date." The Senator also said he

by the facts to date." The Senator also said he thought that "at the present time" Mr. Nixon would serve out his full term in office. Mr. Mansfield stressed that the impeachment of a President was a last resort and a matter to be decided by the House of Representatives, rather than by public opinion. public opinion.

public opinion. "Each member of the House must decide for himself what is hearsay and what is evi-dence," he said. "If you have impeachment you bring the whole Govern-ment to a halt," the Senator continued. "The whole Senate would be over in the House. We have to differentiate between the man and the office—the institution is what counts." Informal Meeting Urged

Informal Meeting Urged

Senator Mansfield suggested that the President meet inform-ally with the Senate Watergate committee after the initial phase of the hearings was completed.

of the hearings was completed. He said he agreed with Mr. Nixon that it would be im-proper for him to appear while witnesses were still appearing before the committee. "We should wait until all the evi-dence is in, until all the facts are laid out," Mr. Mansfield said.

He also said the committee "does not have irrefutable evi-dence" that the President was involved in the Watergate affair.

Senate Majority Leader Mike Mansfield, left, and John N. Mitchell speaking as they passed each other yesterday on Capitol Hill.

> In response to reporters' questions, however, the Senate imajority leader said he agreed that the concept of executive privilege might have to be altered in a case involving sus-pected wrongdoing, thus neces-sitating some contact between the President and the Senate committee. committee.

committee. Senator Mansfield said he thought Mr. Nixon should sup-ply papers dealing with the Watergate matter to the com-mittee, and that the controvery surrounding the financing of the President's homes in San Clemente, Calif., and Key Bis-cayne, Fla., "does raise ques-tions" that need to be dealt with.

7-11-73 NYT