Weicker Concedes He Got Aid From White House Fund in '70

NYTimes

Special to The New York Times

JUL 1 2 1973

Mr. Weicker denied that his receipt of the funds — which reported totaled $65,000, raised in part by Herbert W. Kalmbach, President Nixon's former personal attorney — was in any way improper. "Everything was properly reported" the was properly reported," the Senator said, according to The Associated Press.

The Washington Star-News reported today that Senator Weicker was one of more than 20 Republican recipients of an estimated $1.5-million in cashier's checks that was distributed to Republican candidates in have been operated out of a basement backroom in a Washington townhouse — was under the direct supervision of H. R. Haldeman, the former White House chief of staff.

"The Public Institute"

The existence of the White House fund-raising operation had been previously reported. The Washington newspaper said that the operation used adummy name, "The Public Institute," to serve as a cover for the distribution of the money. The money was reportedly handled by Jack A. Gleason, a former White House aide who now is connected with a consulting firm here.

Mr. Gleason was said to be unavailable for comment today. In graph of the was told o the bstar-News article.

He immediately left the hearings to tell newsmen that his Washington Finance Committee received about $78,000 in donations during 1970, all of which, he said, was eventually transferred to his campaign committee in Connecticut. Mr. Weicker also said that the contributions were fully reported to the Secretary of State's office in Connecticut.

The 1970 campaign finance laws permitted the setting up of finance committees in the laws permitted the setting up of finance committees. It was a major the laws permitted the setting up of finance committees in the laws permitted the setting up of finance committees. It was a major the laws permitted the setting up of finance committees in the laws permitted the setting up of finance committees. It was a major the laws permitted the setting up of finance committees in the laws permitted the setting up of finance committees in the laws permitted the setting up of finance committees. Act of 1971.

WASHINGTON, July 11 — but his office read newsmen a statement disavowing any responsibility for, or control of, nowledged today that he had received a substantial contribution from a secret White House political fund during his successful 1970 campaign for the Senate.

Mr. Weicker denied that his receipt of the funds — which reported totaled $65,000, raised in part by Herbert W. Kalmbach, President Nixon's former personal attorney — was in ing nor as to its ultimate recipients."

The Star-News said it had been unable to learn the names of the donors responsible for contributing the $1.5-million, which raises the amount of pre-1972 Republican cash to at least $3.5-million, including leftover funds from the 1968 Presidential race.

Weicker Leaves Hearing

Welcker Leaves Hearing
1970.

The Star-News quoted Senate
Watergate committee investigators as saying that the fundraising operation — said to have been operated out of a basement backroom in a Washington townhouse — was under

Welcker Leaves Hearing
Senator Weicker, a member of the Senate Watergate committee, was listening to former Attorney General John N.
Mitchell's testimony this morning when he was told o the basement backroom in a Washington townhouse — was under