Haldeman Ran San Clemente

By Jack Anderson

The $700,000 renovation of President Nixon's San Clemente estate was directed by former White House chief of staff H. R. Haldeman who, in the name of presidential secu-rity, sought the replacement of rundown equipment, restoration of crumbling walls, purchase of new fixtures ar landscaping of the grounds and most of it at the taxpayers' expense.

Our investigation of the grand renovation has pin-pointed Haldeman as the expediter. He operated through an "architectural coordinator" who was supposed to harmonize the security requirements with the private improve-ments. But many of the im-provements somehow wound up on the taxpayers' bills.

The interior of the San Clemente home was designed by Channel & Chaffin, a Los Angeles firm, working closely with Pat Nixon. The First Lady helped choose the fabrics and furnishings, including $4.834.50 worth of rich furniture which Channel & Chaffin den. But the bill for the den furniture, including a $472 Haldeman on the San Cleleather-top desk with brass mente improvements. Another tape, Ehrlichman chortled desk lamps, club chair, lounge spokesman insisted, however, chair and "decorative" pillows, that the Secret Service initiwas paid by the taxpayers.

Competent sources have told us that Secret Service chief James J. Rowley was so appalled at the misuse of the taxpayers' money that he tried for three years to bring congressional investigators to San Clemente to see what was going on.

Rep. Tom Steed (D-Okla.). who oversees the Secret Service budget, acknowledged to us that Rowley had "hegged him to visit the Nixon home, even if it was for only a weekend. Because of "the pressure of time," Steed's subcommittee never made the trip.

Steed now feels that Rowley was torn between his loyalty to the President and his obligation to the taxpayers. "I think what he was trying to tell me," Steed said, "was that the White House hot shots the White House hot shots were trying to get him to take the rap for a whole lot of imprudent spending. They were trying to put the rat on poor old Rowley's back."

Lilburn Deputy Director

ated all the improvements. "I'm unaware of anything that the White House requested," said the spokesman.

He wouldn't confirm our report about Rowley's misgivings. "The director's only reason for inviting the Steed sub-committee to San Clemente," said the spokesman, "was to show them how the Secret Service sets up security at a presidential residence."

A spokesman for the General Services Administration, which paid for the President's den furniture called it a den furni "perfectly furniture, called it fectly legitimate" pense.

Watergate Whispers When John Dean first came to the Watergate prosecutors with his confession, wanted to wire him for sound and send him back to the White House to record his conversations with H. R. Haldeman and John Ehrlichman. Dean refused...

The White House conspirators, however, began taping their own telephone conversaover reports that Dean had made a bad impression on the prosecutors. Apparently Dean had told a rambling, disjointed, almost incoherent story during his first session with the prosecutors. . .

On another tape, man told President Ehrlich-Nixon's Herbert personal attorney, Kalmbach, that Dean had mis-led them both. Kalmbach asked whether Dean, in his confession, had given a way "the whole enchilada" .... Watergate ringleader E. Howard Hunt, in a taped phone conversation with White conversation with House aide Charles Colson, suggested that Watergate was really an asset to the Nixon campaign, since it was divert ing the Democrats from the 'real issues"

Investigators say Hunt kept most of the hush money intended to buy the silence of the Watergate defendants. The investigators estimate Hunt has salted away more than $100,000, which never reached his fellow defendants . The investigators are ear ger to examine the papers of Hunt's late wife, Dorothy, who iese is supposed to have said her notes "would impeach the President 10 times over"
