Justice Dept. Aide Named to Cox Staff

Jill W. Volner, a Justice Department trial lawyer handling labor cases in the criminal division, has been named an assistant prosecutor in the office of Watergate special investigator Archibald Cox.

Notice of Mrs. Volner's appointment was filed yesterday in U.S. District Court. She is joining the staff of James F. Neal, who heads Cox's task force investigating the burglary of the Democratic National Committee at the Watergate June 17, 1972, and its subsequent cover-up by the White House.

Mrs. Volner, 30, was graduated from Columbia University Law School in 1968 and came to the Justice Department in 1969. She worked in the organized crime section before moving to the management and labor section in May, 1970.
