

Ehrlichman Says He Hopes Tapes Will Be Released

London

John D. Ehrlichman, President Nixon's former chief domestic affairs adviser, said yesterday he hopes the White House will produce its tape recordings of the President's daily business.

"I think they (the tapes) will be the ultimate evidence," Ehrlichman said.

Ehrlichman said he had not been aware that conversations with the President were being recorded. He said he has "nothing to worry about" if the tapes are made public.
