Scowls Now Smiles, Hisses Now Silence

By DOUGLAS E. KNEELAND Special to The New York Times

WASHINGTON, July 26 — It wasn't exactly a love feast, but John D. Ehrlichman and the Senate Watergate com-mitee seemed today to have decided to at least store biology decided to at least stop kick-ing sand in one another's faces.

faces. During his first two days on the witness stand, the hostility between the former domestic affairs adviser to the President and the com-mittee members all but crackled through the crowded caucus room on the third floor of the Old Senate Office Building. Building. If he was frequently glowering and was frequently glow-ering and waspishly aggres-sive in his answers, they were often snipish and trans-parently skeptical in their questions parently skeptical in their questions. Today things were some-what different. The husky, baldish Mr. Ehrlichman smiled a lot through his 5 o'clock shadow. And while he was no Uriah Heep, his quotient of defer-ence had risen noticeably. For the most part, the com-

For the most part, the com-mittee members replied in kind, apparently sealing the "truce with honor."

A Patriarch's Prerogative

Senator Sam J. Ervin Jr., e courtly, white-haired hairman, may have the chairman, may have smoothed the way for the detente.

Recognizing that Mr. Ehr-lichman seemed to feel like a White House rider (albeit unhorsed) treating with the enemy camp on the hill, the 76-year-old Mr. Ervin exer-cised a natriarch's property enemy camp on the hill, the 76-year-old Mr. Ervin exer-cised a patriarch's preroga-tive by silencing his most vocal followers. Seating himself at the committee table under the television lights at 10:12 A.M. after arriving to the applause of the standing-room crowd in the caucus room, the North Charolina Democrat sternly repeated his warning of yesterday. "We are trying to conduct a dignified hearing which will be as fair as possible to everybody concerned," he drawled, "and the committee is going to have to give se-rious consideration to the question of excluding from the hearing room persons who audibly express their approval or disapproval of any person or any question or any answer in an audible manner, and I hope that Io will not have to repeat this request again."

The crowds this week have really been on Mr. Ehrlich-man, hissing and groaning, at parts of his testimony, laugh-ing at barbs from the interroau gators.

Not only Mr. Ehrlichman-but also his former White-House associates, one said, have been annoyed at the "claques" in the committee,

But Senator Ervin put a stop to the noise today. He is the indisputable hero of, most of those who wait on long lines for the privilegan of climbing the winding marble stairs to stand on the kleig-lighted edge of history in the making. And what Senator Ervin wants, Senator Ervin at least from his admirers in that room. So when 'he' came back from lunch later, But Senator Ervin put a.

applause was broken. As scattering of handclaps was quickly shushed. When he break to vote, not a sound. was heard.

Was neard. On his part, Mr. Ehrlich-man had at least one other-good reason for softening. the grim visage he has pre-sented to the committee, the spectators and the television. audience His wife, Jeanne, had scolded him for scowling

A Broad Smile

A Broad Smile As Senator Lowell "Pi Weicker Jr., the Connecticut Republican who has been "a" persistent critic of the White House handling of the Water gate affair, questioned him this morning about the 1971 break-in at the office of Dr. Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist; Mr. Ehrlichman interjected with a broad smile: "Since "Incidentally, my wife" with a broad smile: "Incidentally, my wife chided me a little bit last night because I appear to scowl at you when you anscowl at you when you an-swer your questions. The fact is you have over your head two of the greatest lights I have encountered and I am afraid that has to account for the way I look in your direction. I am sorry", At that, the crowd laughed —in friendly fashion. And Senator Ervin, benignly with-holding his gavel, forgava, them.

The New York Times John D. Ehrlichman going over his papers in a $room^{10}$ across the rotunda of the Old Senate Office Building from the Caucus Room. He arrived a half hour early,