The chairman of a congressional investigations subcommittee said yesterday he plans to subpoena records of government spending to improve President Nixon's homes in Florida and California.

Representative Jack

Brooks accused the administration of making a "systematic effort" to impede an investigation by "arrogant contempt" for Congress in refusing to turn over documents on expenditures on the President's properties in Key Biscayne, Fla., and San Clemente, Calif.

White House officials with the House Government Activities Subcommittee, of which he is chairman.

Government spending on construction at Mr. Nixon's homes is expected to total $3.5 million to $3.7 million, according to administration sources.
