4 Attorneys Added to Cox Staff

United Press International

Watergate Special Prosecutor Archibald Cox announced yesterday the appointment of four trial lawyers to his investigation of illegal contributions in the 1972 presidential campaign and the secret White House "plumbers" operation.

The four were Jay S. Horowitz, 30, of Philadelphia, a former assistant U.S. attorney in New York; Frank M. Turkeheimer, 33, of Madison, Wis., associate law professor at the University of Wisconsin and a former assistant U.S. attorney in New York; Charles C. Breyer, 31, assistant district attorney of San Francisco, and John A. Sale, 29, an assistant U.S. attorney for Connecticut.

Three Cox aides meanwhile have resigned to return to teaching at Harvard Law School, Cox said. They were James Vorenberg and Philip B. Heymann, special assistants to Cox, and Stephen G. Breyer, a member of the Cox task force investigating the administration's relations with International Telephone and Telegraph Corp.

Cox said the personnel changes leaves him with 37 full-time lawyers and three part-time consultants, in addition to a professional and clerical staff of 42 persons.

The White House "plumbers" were the undercover agents commissioned by former presidential adviser John D. Ehrlichman.

One of the "plumbers," E. Howard Hunt Jr., took part in the September, 1971, break-in at the Los Angeles office of Daniel Ellsberg's psychiatrist, and was later convicted in connection with the June 17, 1972, break-in at Democratic national headquarters at the Watergate complex.
