Mr. Krogh, along with John D. Ehrlichman and David Young, also asked for access to all tape recordings or written records of White House meetings in which the President discussed Dr. Ellsberg and the disclosure of the Pentagon papers. Only one meeting cited on March 21, 1973 - was among those recorded on tapes among those recorded on tapes that Federal Judge John J. Si-rica has requested in the Wa-tergate inquiry. Mr. Krogh, once head of the secret White House "plumbers squad" assigned to plug leaks of secret Government informa-tion, was the only defendant in the Ellsberg case to seek the President's personal ap-pearance

His attorney, Nobert Schlei, said in a pre-trial discovery motion released by the court yesterday that "President Nix-on has, for his own reasons, so far refused to cooperate with counsel for Krogh in permitting access to potentially exculpatory evidence." He said the tapes and other records in Mr. Nixon's possession would help prove Mr. Krogh innocent of burglary and conspiracy charges in the 1971 break-in at the Beverly Hills office of Dr. Lewis J. Fielding, Dr. Ellsberg's former psychiatrist.

The motion said that if Mr. Krogh were ultimately convict-ed, such evidence might en-courage a light sentence. It noted that the "plumbers squad" had been formed on or-ders of President Nixon "to meet what was perceived to be a grave threat to national se-curity of the United States," the leak of national secrets. Mr. Ehrlichman, in a sepa-rate motion, asked for access to tape recordings of 12 spe-cific conversitions involving Mr. Nixon and himself as well as other former officials.
