

Agnew's New Job

Beverly Hills

Former Vice President Spiro T. Agnew has been hired as a consultant for an international trading firm co-owned by Frank Jameson, the husband of actress Eva Gabor, it was disclosed yesterday.

Jameson, who said he and his wife were "good friends" of the Agnews, met with Agnew in Washington shortly after Agnew pleaded no contest to a tax evasion charge and resigned as vice president.

"When Mr. Agnew and I met in Washington, he was talking about possibly getting into international trade," Jameson said. Agnew was then retained as a consultant for J-W Industries, owned by Jameson and Leopold S. Wyler.

Jameson said Agnew would receive a "normal consultant's fee" for his services. He did not elaborate.

"Every man deserves to make a living," he said. "I think he has great talents. He has broad experience in the international field. I admire the man very much and I'd like to be associated with him."

Referring to Agnew's reputation, Jameson said, "I think the American public are a fair minded group. Most people I have talked to think he got a raw deal."
