

Nixon Stays at White House Again to Work

Washington

President Nixon spent his second weekend in a row at the White House, cutting back on travel during the energy shortage and working on issues ranging from energy to health insurance.

Deputy Press Secretary Gerald L. Warren said the President spent yesterday morning at work in his Oval Office and plans to meet this morning with Secretary of Health, Education and Welfare Casper Weinberger.

Associated Press