

A Delay On Casey Nomination

Washington

The Senate Banking Committee pigeonholed the nomination of William J. Casey to head the Export-Import Bank yesterday, pending an investigation of whether he committed perjury in a congressional investigation of the ITT merger case.

After a closed two-hour meeting of his committee, John Sparkman (Dem-Ala.) announced only that action on the nomination was postponed by the committee "in order that it may receive additional information."

Other Senators said, however, the delay would extend at least into the next session of Congress, starting January 21, and until the committee heard from special Watergate prosecutor Leon Jaworski.
