

Nixon Uncertain on His 1946-60 State Taxes

Washington

An official spokesman said yesterday that President Nixon "can't remember" if he paid any state income taxes when he served as vice president, 1952-60, and as a member of Congress from California, 1946-52.

Kenneth Clawson also said that White House officials have no intention of trying to search records to determine whether Mr. Nixon paid California income taxes during the period when he was a House member, a senator and two-term vice president under Dwight D. Eisenhower.

Mr. Nixon disclosed December 8 in a detailed personal financial report that he has paid no state income taxes in California or the district of Columbia since becoming president in 1969.

Clawson, deputy director of White House communications, said he had asked Mr. Nixon about his congressional and vice presidential years and the President told him "he can't remember" whether he paid state income taxes during that time.

Gerald L. Warren, deputy presidential press secretary, said he was advised that "we're not going to be able to provide that information."

Both Clawson and Warren indicated that the White House felt it would be too difficult to locate records pertaining to Mr. Nixon's tax status in California between 1948 and 1962.

Mr. Nixon has voted in California since he became president and certified on his 1969 federal tax return that his property in San Clemente was his "principal residence."

When Mr. Nixon's financial report was issued, White House officials said the District of Columbia does not impose an income tax on any elected federal official who resides in the city and that California tax officials had ruled that Mr. Nixon, as president, owed no tax to their state because he did not live there most of the time.
