

Ziegler Says He Has Faith In U.S. Press

New York

"I have not lost faith in the nation's press," White House press secretary Ronald Ziegler has told Newsweek magazine.

But in an interview in the issue released yesterday, Ziegler said he had "become disappointed in certain segments of the Washington press — for its excesses, for its prejudgments about people and some of the professional conduct as exhibited in the briefings.

"People are preoccupied with the answers to the questions, and I think they should look to the questions asked as well."

United Press