SFChronicle Mills Would Tell Nixon to Resign

Washington

Representative Wilbur D. Mills (Dem-Ark.), perhaps the most influential member of the House, said yesterday President Nixon should resign rather than subject the nation to a bitter impeachment struggle on the House floor.

Mills first told newsmen he felt the President should resign, if and when the House Judiciary Committee recommends that he be impeached for Watergate or other matters. Mills said he didn't know whether the committee would recommend impeachment but added that "everything I hear" points that way.

Later he seemed to harden his remarks by saying that if Mr. Nixon "were looking to me for advice, I would say resign in the near future." Mills said that "under existing circumstances, we would be better off with Jerry (Vice President) Ford as President."

Mills also made this statement, which appeared to be a direct plea to the President to step down for the good of the country:

"If, it takes legislation granting him immunity from criminal prosecution after leaving office for him to resign, I would be willing to sponsor it."

Mills, chairman of the Ways and Means Committee, is considered the House's most skillful legislator. What he says is important because he sits at the center of the House establishment and, as a moderate southerner, is very influential with the center group whose votes would be needed for impeachment in the House.

Mills said he doubts there is sufficient proof now on the public record that Mr. Nixon has committed the "high crimes and misdemeanors" the Constitution makes grounds for impeachment.

But he said the President should step down before the issue reaches the level of a fight in the full House, because this struggle, whatever the outcome, would "bring about the worst schism in the country since the Civil War." Asked about revelations of gaps in White House tapes of Watergate conversations, Mills said: "That eliminates the candor operation. It produces more doubt by the public as to his credibility. If he is not credible, it's hard for him to lead the country in difficult times."

Mills also said the investigation by the Joint Committee on Internal Revenue Taxation, which he heads, on whether Mr. Nixon properly took large tax deductions for donatiog his vice presidential papers to the government should be completed in 30 to 40 days.

Other comments on impeachment:

• House minority leader, John J. Rhodes (Rep-Ariz.) said after a meeting with Mr. Nixon at the White House that the President did not appear "particularly frightened" by the possibility of impeachment.

• Representaive Jack Brooks (Dem-Tex.), a senior member of the House Judiciary Committee, said the flow of revelations of gaps in White House tapes seems to be a "pattern of obstruction of justice." Brooks indicated that he agreed with James Madison, principal author of the impeachment provisions in the Constitution, that a president can be held responsible and impeached for acts by -his subordinates.

Washington Post

Representative Wilbur Mills discussed impeachment — and what he might do