Admiral Denies Telling Yeoman To Take Highly Classified Data

By SEYMOUR M. HERSH

Special to The New York Times

Feb. 21-WASHINGTON, Rear Adm. Robert O. Welander denied today that he ever "or-dered or directed" a Navy yeoman to pilfer highly classified documents while the two men worked together in the White House in 1971.

In his first public explanation of his role in the alleged military spying incident, the admiral did acknowledge, how-ever, that he forwarded two packets of illicitly obtained material to Adm. Thomas H. Moorer, chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, in July and September, 1971.

The documents, he said, were "offered" to him by Yeoman Ist Cl. Charles E. Radford, who told the Senate Armed Services Committee yesterday that he had been urged by Admiral Welander to gather the material while on trips to the Far East with Henry A. Kissinger and Gen. Alexander M. Haig Jr., then President Nixon's top advisers on the National Security Council.

"At this point," Denator Harold E. Hughes, Democrat of Iowa, said after the admiral's appearance this morning, "there seems to be a direct

Continued on Page 37, Column 4 Continued From Page 1, Col. 8 conflict." "One or the other," Welander and Yeoman Rad-ford, "would have to be com-mitting perjury."

In his testimony, Admiral Welander also said that in December, 1971, shortly after December, 1971, shortly after the White House began an inquiry into the military spying, he was asked by John D. Ehrlichman, a top Presidential aide, to sign a statement that "would have had me admit to the wildest possible totally false charges of 'political spy-ing' on the White House." "Needless to say," the ad-miral said, "I reacted rather strongly to these accusations and set the statement aside." Admiral Welander also de-nied Yeoman Radford's allega-

Admiral weiander also de-nied Yeoman Radford's allega-tion of yesterday that the yeo-man routinely funneled hun-dreds of illicitly obtained White dreds of illicitly obtained White House documents to the Penta-gon in sealed envelopes. "It was an authorized flow of informa-tion," the admiral said, "and it did entail hundreds of docu-ments—but they were not to my knowledge 'stolen' or 'pur-loined' as some would have you believe."

Testified in Secret

The yeoman testified that he had been urged to turn his clerical assignment into "an opclerical assignment into "an op-portunity to do a job for the Joint Chiefs" by Admiral Wel-cder and his predecessor. Rear Adm. Rembrandt C. Rob-inson, who was killed in South-east Asia in 1972. Admiral Welander testified in Secret the computed secret before the committee, which is investigating the mili-tary spying charges. The com-mittee released his 22-page prepared statement this after-noon.

In it, the admiral said that it was he who first named Yeoman Radford as a key suspect in the December, 1971, leak of secret White House materials on the India-Pakistan war to Jack Anderson, the columnis Admiral Welander then sugges ed that the yeoman's subse-quent naming of him in an in-ternal military spy ring "had and retains the appearance of a verv clever retribution als on the India-Pakistan war a very clever retribution against the one who had ini-tiated the investigation."

His implication seemed to be that Yeoman Radford, by nam-ing him, had succeeded in divering the White House inquiry into the leak of the pap-ers to Mr. Anderson to the military spying allegations.

The stocky, bespectacled ad-miral served from June to De-cember, 1971, as head of the military liaison unit assigned to the National eSecurity Coun-cil. Both he and Yeoman Rad-ford wave abruthy transformed ford were abruptly transferred and their office in the Security Council abolished after the Anderson leak and the subsequent discovery of the alleged mili :d ∋l tary spying ring.

Young Report Cited

Previously, informed sources told The New York Times that the initial investigation of the e ;-Anderson leak had produced an admission from Yeoman Radford about his military spyf s Ing. A report completed in early 1 1972 by David R. Young Jr., then a member of the White House investigation unit called the "plumbers," is known to have concluded that Admiral Welander and Admiral Moorer were involved in the spying operation.

In his statement, Admiral Welander described his inter-view with Mr. Ehrlichman who was in over-all supervision of the plumbers, in harsh terms. "I found myself trying to put gross distortions of fact and cir cumstance into some reasonabl cumstance into some reasonabl and rational perspective," the admiral said.

He said, "Ehrlichman's ques-tions were all either directly attributed to statements made by Yeoman Radford or based on knowledge that only he [the yeoman] could have had of certain aspects of my duties." "And I would pint out again," the admiral told the Senators, "that these were the unsubstantiated assertions of a young man under intensive in-terrogation as a primary sus-pect in an offense which could entail severe penalties for him." Despite this, the admiral said, "They had apparently served to shift the focus of the [White House] investigation away from the originial matter of the An-derson leaks and onto my own duties."

6

In previous testimony, Ad-miral Moorer said that he was twice overruled by "higher au-thorities" when he urged that judicial proceedings be initiated against Yeoman Radford for his alleged role in leaking the White House documents to Mr. Anderson.

Anderson. Yeoman Radford has re-peatedly denied any involve-ment in the Anerson leaks. Asked about Admiral Wel-ander's testimony today, he said that he stood by his ac-count. "What I said was true, and that's the way it was," he told newsmen and that's unc told newsmen. """ Welander's de. Admiral Welander's de-scriptions of the two instances in which he forwarded docu-ments purloined by Yeoman Radford paralleled the account previously given to the com-mittee by Admiral Moorer.

'Thin Sheaf of Papers'

The first instance, he testi-The first instance, he testi-fied, took place shortly after the yeoman returned from a trip with Mr. Kissinger to Asia and China in July, 1971. The yeoman gave me "an evelope with a thin sheaf ofpap ers— that he said would fill in some of the background," Admiral Welander said. Later, another packet of documents that had been mailed from India by the been mailed from India by the yeoman crossed his desk, the admiral said.

admiral said. Some of those documents, he said, "did in fact supplement the information I had gotten," including a Vietnam situation report. He said that he had passed the material along to Admiral Moorer, who "looked at it [the Vietnam report] and then rapidly scanned the other items." items."

Yeoman Radford and Mr. Kiss inger have tesitified that one the documents taken on that of trip was a private report to President Nixonconcerning a conversation between Mr. Kiss-inger and Chou En-lai, the Chinese Premier. Such mes-sages were never relayed to Admiral Moorer's office, Mr. Kissinger has said. Admiral Welander made no mention of that document.

Admiral Welander said that the second delivery of docu-ments took place after Yeo-man Radford returned from a trip to Southeast Asia with General Heiz

Trip to Southeast Asia with General Haig. "I placed this file of papers in a manila envelope, marked it for 'Admiral Moorer's eyes only,' and sent it to him," Ad-miral Welander said.