Both bills would set varying penalties from $5,000 to $10,000 and one year in jail for anyone wrongfully disseminating any criminal information. The two bills would also allow stricter state dissemination laws to take precedence over Federal legislation.

Generally, according to Lawrence M. Baskir, the subcommittee counsel, the Ervin bill establishes more precisely who is entitled to receive criminal information, while allowing more state control of criminal and mothation dissemination, Mr. Baskir said.
