1974

Ford Indicates He'd Consider 276 GOP Draft

By Jules Witcover Washington Post Staff Writer

Vice President Gerald R. eral John N. Mitchell to head Ford, while reiterating that he CREEP, Ford was asked does not intend to be a candiwhether he accordingly condate for President in 1976, sidered Mr. Nixon responsible, said yesterday he'd have to "I think you have to conface the prospect if he were cede he had the major decimals." lican National Convention.

think will happen, then I've got a hard decision to make."

The Vice President repeated exactly right."

at he had no intention of Ford acknowledged that asking any delegate or potential delegate to support his nomination or to talk to any member of the Republican National Committee about the life of acknowledged that Mitchell was no novice, having also run Mr. Nixon's successful 1968 campaign. But, he said, "he had some other than the life of tional Committee about the subject, lest "I lose my credibility" as an effective Vice Ford also implied that Mitch-President.

Nevertheless, the statement inflicted clearly that Ford has not slammed the door completely on running for President in 1976, if that should be campaign peaked too early the will of his party, expressed by its official nominating body.

Improve the 1968 either, when Mr. Nixon barely edged out Democrat Hubert H. Humphrey. "In retrospect the 1968 campaign peaked too early and had some troubles that last week in '68," he said.

Concerning his Chicago

this: Never again must Amerilar party organizations and form reply.

dictate the terms of a national Ford ma election."

Yesterday, reminded that President Nixon himself had selected former Attorney Gen-nominated by the next Republican National Convention. | Sion in the appointment of John Mitchell," Ford said.

Asked at a luncheon meeting with reporters in the Capitol what he would do if the convention so acted, Ford said:

John Wittener, Ford said.

The Vice President said he had discussed CREEP with Mr. Nixon in "a recent conversation," and told him he assumed the President, said: "That's a hard question to with foreign policy consideraanswer. . . If those circumtions, had called Mitchell in stances develop, which I don't the spring of 1972 "and said, think will happen, then I've got a hard decision to make." (the President) said, "That's resident. ell had not been any political Nevertheless, the statement miracle-worker in 1968, either, Concerning his Chicago speech, Ford said he saw Mr. Ford's remarks yesterday speech, Ford said he saw Mr. came against the backdrop of Nixon at a Republican leaderhis speech before Republican ship meeting at the White Midwestern leaders in Chicago last Saturday in which, "the President didn't make an in his boldest show of independence from the White He said he didn't think he was House to date, he sharply attacked President Nixon's 1912 over the speech, though some people there may not have liked it liked it.

The speech, in which Ford "The political lesson of The speech, in which Ford Watergate," Ford said then to also asked future Republican applauding party officials, "is presidential candidates to this: Never again must Ameri-"sign in advance on the dotted cans allow an arrogant, elite line that they will not set up guard of political adolescents outside committes without the like CREEP [Committee for party's consent," has already generated "a mountain of President] to bypass the regumail," he said, requiring a Ford made clear that his blast at CREEP was no off-thecuff remark. "Some people get the mistaken impression that it was a thought that came to us on the plane and we wrote it on the plane," he said. Actually, he had similarly critiany, he had similarly criticized CREEP in an interview with Henry Brandon of the London Sunday Times published on March 17, he said.

"These were my feelings long before" the Chicago trip, he said. "Frankly, I was looking for a forum where it would do the most good."

While he has been attempting to "show some independing to "show some independence," he said, he also has been trying to demonstrate his continuing support of Mr. Nixon. He cited a later Saturday speech in Clearwater, Fla., day speech in Clearwater, Fia., in which he said the President is "in excellent health, mentally and physically," has been possible "the best President in history" on foreign policy, has "more pluses than minuses in domestic policy and isn't go-ing to resign."

Asked why he didn't defend Mr. Nixon before his Chicago audience, Ford grinned and said: "I saw where Reagan and Rockefeller took care of that, so I didn't have to."

Ford said he did not clear the Chicago speech with the White House.