President Nixon, in Paris to attend a memorial service for Georges Pompidou, had a busy morning there yesterday. Top: He walked through the streets, greeting and being greeted by Parisians. He also found time to walk and talk, right, with President Nikolai V. Podgorny of the Soviet Union. After meeting with Premier Kakuei Tanaka of Japan at the residence of the U.S. Ambassador, the President threw Mr. Tanaka a salute in departing. At still another time he walked with Prime Minister Wilson in the street. After his whirlwind diplomatic rounds, he flew back to Washington, arriving at Andrews Air Force Base, Md., in midafternoon.
