

Cheers for Agnew at A Concert

Washington

Former Vice President Spiro T. Agnew drew applause when he arrived at a local sports arena for a concert by singer Frank Sinatra.

Catcalls from the crowd of about 15,000 persons were drowned out by clapping Wednesday night as Agnew and his party made their way to seats near the stage at the Capital Center in suburban Largo, Md.

Agnew, a one-time governor of Maryland and county executive of Baltimore county, smiled and waved at the crowd.

A few minutes later, Secretary of State Henry Kissinger and his wife Nancy arrived and also drew vigorous applause.

The evening marked the first time since his resignation that Agnew has appeared in public at a large gathering.
