Judiciary Hearings Resuming Today

The House Judiciary Committee resumes this morning its closed hearings on the impeachment of President Nixon and may consider this week the issuance of new subpoenas for White House documents.

The subpoena question, the Associated Press reported, is to be considered Wednesday morning. Today committee members will hear the first of several tape-recorded presidential conversations and John Doar, the chief counsel, is scheduled to continue presenting a chronology of the Watergate break-in and its aftermath.

The closed hearings this week are to continue through Thursday.
