

Senate Votes More Money for Watergate Panel

Washington

The Senate voted yesterday to provide its special Watergate committee an additional $200,000, bringing the total funds allotted the panel so far to $2 million.

With only four senators present, the Senate passed the supplemental appropriation unanimously. Assistant Democratic leader Robert C. Byrd said during brief debate that he opposed the resolution, but he did not vote against it.

The Select Committee on Presidential Campaign Activities — which is known as the Watergate committee — was established Feb. 7, 1973, with an appropriation of $500,000. Its life has been extended twice and now is scheduled to end June 30.
