Middies' Gifts

President Nixon was given a startling variety of objects as he shook hands yesterday with midshipmen representing the companies of the Naval Academy brigade. They included a footlong rubber alligator, which the President shook playfully; a toy airplane, which he launched for a short flight; a pink Frisbee, which he flipped 20 feet, and a little American flag. All of them, it was explained, were identifying symbols adopted by the midshipmen's various companies.
