

Notes on People [byline, Albin Krebs]

Some weeks ago, Mrs. Martha Mitchell was the co-host for several days on "Panorama," a daytime television program in Washington, and she managed to endear herself to her audience so completely that the show was the talk of the capital. Now New Yorkers will have a chance to see Mrs. Mitchell work in TV when she serves as co-host next week of WCBS-TV's "The Pat Collins Show." Plans for Wednesday's show sound intriguing. Mrs. Mitchell, estranged wife of John N. Mitchell, the former Attorney General, will discuss the Watergate scandal with Carl Bernstein and Bob Woodward, The Washington Post reporters who have written about how they covered the story in "All the President's Men."
