

Reed Collins: Here at home the furor continues over what Henry Kissinger did or knew about wiretaps when leakage started in the late 60's. Arizona's Republican Senator, Barry Goldwater, has this opinion.

Goldwater [voice]: The important question to me is, why are we allowing all these leaks of top secret material out of the Pentagon, out of the FBI? It worries me to think that the Washington Post has access to practically any piece of material they want, regardless of what damage it might do to a man's personal life or to the country itself. And instead of worrying about what Dr. Kissinger said or somebody else said, I'd be getting at the Ellsbergs and the other traitors in this country and sending them up for a stretch and see if that wouldn't stop it.

[Complete.]