

The Schedule For Debate on Impeachment

Washington

The House Judiciary Committee is holding to a schedule for its impeachment inquiry that could produce a final vote in committee between July 26 and July 30.

Chairman Peter Rodino (Dem-N.J.) is aiming at the earlier date, which is a week from tomorrow, but other members say the later one is more likely.

The schedule after that calls for 100 hours of debate and voting on the House floor, starting around August 12. House action is due to be completed by August 23.

Today and tomorrow the committee will meet behind closed doors for briefing sessions.
