Reports of Nixon Ill Health Are Questioned by Visitors

NYTimes

By JOHN HERBERS SEP 10 1974

WASHINGTON, Sept. 9 — Several persons who have recently visited former President Richard M. Nixon cast doubt today on reports that he is in poor health, one of the reasons cited by President Ford yesterday in granting Mr. Nixon an unconditional pardon.

One former counselor to Mr. Nixon said that two close friends of the former President —C. G. Rebozo and Robert H. Abplanalp—who also have visited Mr. Nixon recently, had startled the talk that became common around San Clemente that he was on the verge of collapse.

"Those two guys were really lobbying, in effect," the former counselor said, implying that they had sought to arouse sympathy for Mr. Nixon before Mr. Ford's sudden action yesterday.

Other questions as to why Mr. Ford reversed himself he had said he would await legal action before moving on a pardon-remained unanswered as the Ford Administration on its one-month anniversary today, drew widespread criticism for granting the pardon at this time on terms that seemed very favorable to the former Presi-

Reports of Mr. Nixon's health problems in the face of mounting legal problems were by a reported number of sources to have figured heavily in Mr. Ford's action.

Paul Resley, manager of the

Continued on Page 26, Column 1

Continued From Page 1, Col. 7

San Clemente Inn, who lives read them, and I was concerned like everyone else to see how he was coming see how along."

Then when he saw Mr. Nixon a few days ago, Mr. Presley said, he was surprised to see that he looked "super and more relaxed than when he was President."

"He said he had been sun-

"He said he had been sunning and walking," he added.

Mr. Nixon's brother F. Donald Nixon of Newport Beach, Calif., said when he visited the former President 10 days ago he found him "in extremely good health and spirits; he looked good—tanned and busy."

Yet in Washington today, Republicans close to Mr. Ford said that the reports of Mr. Nixon's poor health were an important factor in the President's decision to grant the pardon.

"I have no doubt in my mind," said Senator Robert P. Griffin of Michigan, the Republican whip in the Senate, publican whip in the Senate, "that the condition of the health of the former President was a factor in the President's mind in reaching his decision."

Mr. Ford, in announcing the pardon yesterday, said, "it is common knowledge that serious allegations and accusations!

common knowledge that serious allegations and accusations hang like a sword over our former Presiden's head, threatening his health, as he tries to reshape his life."

Reports From Coast

The report circulating in San Clemente and elsewhere was that Mr. Nixon was depressed to the point of wandering aimlessly about his estate, poring over stacks of unopened mail and unable to keep his mind on a conversation. on a conversation.

Herbert G. Klein, the former Herbert G. Klein, the former White House communications director who is a long-time friend of Mr. Nixon, said today, "Yes, he's distraught and seems preoccupied at times. Sometimes he wanders in his conversation. But that's to be expected from a man who's been pected from a man who's been through what he has. I think his health is good and I'm sure his spirits are improved today."

The controversy over Mr.
Nixon's health was one of several that Mr. Ford's assistants sought to lay to rest as the month-old Ford Administration was struck by an avalanche of adverse reaction to the pardon.

Not a Devious Deal

The aura of good feeling and optimism that enveloped the White House in the month since Mr. Ford became President evaporated. Confusion and uncertainty beset the staff as angry telephone calls and tele-grams came in. White House aides said the reaction was running two to one against the ning two to one against the new President and when he went to Pittsburgh this morning to deliver a speech he encountered hostile demonstrators for the first time. Although Mr. Ford and his assistants said they knew the decision would be controversial, they were struggling to show.

they were struggling to show that the President's decision to pardon Mr. Nixon was not a devious political deal.

They insisted that Mr. Ford had not talked to the former President by telephone during the one-week period that the pardon negotiations were going on. As to Mr. Nixon's health however, continued to raise dals.

An

they said the President was in- Aug. 28 that it would be inapfluenced by the undocumented reports out of San Clemente. fluenced by the undocumented reports out of San Clemente.

"The President," said J. F. terHorst, who resigned yesterday as press secretary, "like the rest of us in the White House, had read all the reports in the air of former President Nixon's physical distress, that he was not looking well and given to, in a sense, moping around San Clemente."

propriate to make any commitment on the Nixon matter until there was some legal action, and then, two days later, initiated action for the pardon. His aides said Mr. Ford's own statement yesterday on signing papers and heard the reports on the Nixon matter until there was some legal action, and then, two days later, initiated action for the pardon. His aides said Mr. Ford's own statement yesterday on signing the pardon would have to suffice as an explanation. In the by acting now he would save both the former President and the nation from further punishment in the Watergate scan-Other aspects of the pardon, ment in the Watergate scan-questions.

Another question was why
One was why the President
Mr. Ford, who unlike his presaid in his news conference on decessor maintains wide politi-local and advisory contacts, kept his plans to pardon Mr. Nixon so closely guarded. White House sources said only four persons besides the President knew of the negotiations and Mr. Ford's plan. These were Philip W. Buchen, the White House counsel; Alexander M. Haig Jr., the chief of staff; Robert T. Hartmann, Presidential counselor, and Benton L. Becker, a Washington lawyer who was brought in to work on the matter.

In any event, Mr. Ford on Aug. 30 asked Mr. Buchen to found out whether a pardon could be granted immediately without awaiting legal action.

In any event, Mr. Ford on Aug. 30 asked Mr. Buchen to found out whether a pardon could be granted immediately without awaiting legal action.

In any event, Mr. Ford on Aug. 30 asked Mr. Buchen to found out whether a pardon could be granted immediately without awaiting legal action.

In any event, Mr. Ford on Aug. 30 asked Mr. Buchen to found out whether a pardon could be granted immediately without awaiting legal action.

In any event, Mr. Ford on Aug. 30 asked Mr. Buchen to found out whether a pardon out whethe cal and advisory contacts, kept in advance. the matter.

There was no immediate explanation for this, other than that Mr. Ford was anxious that word of his plan not leak out

Q. Was there something that happened just prior to his coming to you that got his interest working in doing this thing just now?

A. If there was, I don't know what it was. Later, Mr. Buchen added,

"I don't know what went time through his mind. He didn't were tell me."

But Mr? Buchen

not investigating any new ment ackr charges against the former President that might act as a gate case.

went 'time bomb" unless Mr. Nixon granted Immunity from prosecution.

But Mr? Buchen and other aides sought to lay to rest suspicions that the pardon—which was accompanied by an agreement for Mr. Nixon to destroy his tape recordings—may have been intended to cover up any scandal in the Nixon Administration that has not yet come to light.

Mr. Buchen said he had been assured by Leon Jaworski, the special prosecutor, that he was not investigating any new on Labor Day weekend, Mr. Buchen brought in Mr. Becker, who served as a mediator between Mr. Nixon, his lawyers and staff and the White House. On Thursday, Mr. Becker went to San Clemente and informed Mr. Nixon that a Presidential was probable. After intensive negotiations there, he returned to Washington on Saturday with an oral agreement that special prosecutor, that he was not investigating any new met acknowledging error, but not criminal guilt.

any new ment acknowledging error, but not criminal guilt, in the Water-