

Notes on People

Martha Mitchell to

In State Supreme Court here yesterday, Justice Manuel A. Gomez awarded Martha Mitchell temporary alimony of $1,000 a week, one-third the sum she had demanded from her husband, John N. Mitchell, the former Attorney General. Justice Gomez noted that in the last year, in which the Mitchells have been separated, Mr. Mitchell had spent about $51,000 for Mrs. Mitchell's maintenance, "and it is the court's view that pending the trial of the [legal separation] action, the defendant's obligations should continue at such a rate." Justice Gomez said that Mr. Mitchell's gross income totals $5,281 a week. He awarded Mrs. Mitchell's lawyers $3,500 in counsel fees, instead of the $35,000 they had asked, an amount Justice Gomez termed "completely divorced from reality."

assist Mr. Nixon's re-election campaign. The Senators asked him about that, and about his relative youth and lack of experience in ambassadorial work.

Victor Borge, the comedy pianist, yesterday left Connecticut's Greenwich pital, where he since Sent was

The nomination of Stanton D. Anderson to be Ambassador to Costa Rica has been withdrawn at his request "for personal reasons," according to the White House. Mr. Anderson, who will be 34 years old tomorrow, was nominated for the post in San José by Richard M. Nixon when he was President.

A spokesman for the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, which must approve all ambassadorial appointments, said that Mr. Anderson, who was a staff assistant in the White House personnel office from 1971 to 1973, has acknowledged that while there he worked in the Nixon Administration's secret "responsiveness program" to induce Federal agencies to