tions of His attorney, Richard Van Service Dussen, said Morgan signed Nixon the deed "knowing that if he refused to do so, at a minimum . . . the President might be exposed to great public embarrassment."

Morgan was a White House aide in the spring of 1970 when he was asked to sign a deed dated 1969 in connection with a Nixon gift of vice presidential papers the previous year according to information filed by prosecutors and interviews with others familiar with the case.

Morgan at first refused, according to sources familiar with the case but later agreed.

The back-dating allowed the Nixons to claim $95,000 as the first installment of a planned $576,000 deduction for a gift of his vice presidential papers.

Last year, the Internal Revenue Service ruled against the deduction for the papers, and ordered the Nixon to pay nearly $500.000 in back taxes

Morgan, who later became an assistant secretary of the Treasury in the Nixon administration, could have been sentenced to five years in jail and fined $10,000 for his plea to the one felony count.

Prosecutors did not ask for a specific sentence for Morgan, but took the unusual action of pointing out to the judge that Morgan had attempted to cover up his crime for several months "by a series of serious premeditated ries of serious premeditated acts" before deciding to enter his plea and admit his guilt.

Hart imposed a two-year sentence on Morgan, but then said only four months of that time will actually have to be spent in jail.

time will actually have to be spent in jail. Morgan will be on probation for the remaining 20 months.

Hart gave Morgan until Jan. 6 at 1 p.m. to report to a federal prison at Lompoc, Calif. Morgan had no comment after sentencing.
