

Notes on People MAY 2 1975

McGill Will Continue As Head of Columbia

Dr. William J. McGill, president of Columbia University, who had suggested a review of his five years in office, has been asked by the trustees to continue with what was described as "a warm handshake of confidence from all."

The 53-year-old New Yorker, formerly chairman of Columbia's psychology department, was chancellor of the University of California at San Diego for two years. He returned as president in the aftermath of the 1968 student disorders at Columbia. In an interview yesterday, Dr. McGill said that he was "not particularly proud" to have had to call the police to the campus "five times in five years," mainly because of "outsiders." His policy, he said, had been "a compassionate state of combat-readiness."

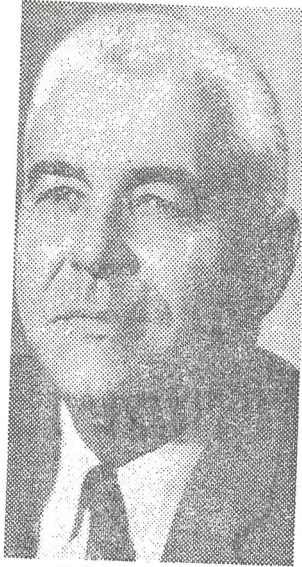

Dr. McGill said that he had been called a "fascist" here for signing an educational agreement with the Shah of Iran, among other things. In Southern California, he said, he had been called a Communist.

After five more years as Columbia president, Dr. McGill said that he would then like to retire "to write about what I've been through — from Herbert Marcuse, Angela Davis and Ronald Reagan on the Coast to Bella Abzug and the Upper West Side liberal community, as well as the Shah of Iran. I think Bella Abzug is much tougher than either Ronald Reagan or the Shah of Iran."

Vice President Rockefeller announced the appointment yesterday of Raymond P. Shafer, former Governor of Pennsylvania, as his counselor on intergovernmental relations. Mr. Shafer, 58, was Governor from 1967 to 1971; and the Vice President cited their previous association in the National Governors' Conference. Mr. Shafer was a Yale Law School classmate of President Ford.

Arriving in Honolulu yesterday, Queen Elizabeth II became the first British monarch to have a Hawaiian holiday. For their first visit to the United States since 1959, she and Prince Philip were put up in the presidential suite of the Kahala Hilton, around Diamond Head from Waikiki.

Last night they were din-

William J. McGill

ner guests of Gov. George R. Aryoshi at his official residence, Washington Place, which was the home of Hawaii's last monarch, Queen Liliuokalani. The royal couple arrived from the Commonwealth Conference in Jamaica and will leave tomorrow for state visits in Hong Kong and Japan. Their party of 30 persons had planned their stopover for Guam until facilities there were overtaxed by refugees from Vietnam.

The fall of South Vietnam "deeply affected" Richard M. Nixon, according to Rabbi Baruch Korff, and caused a rise in his blood pressure, which has plagued him since his bout with phlebitis last year. Rabbi Korff, who is committed to paying $400,000 of Mr. Nixon's legal bills, has paid $165,000 thus far from a fund he has raised. The fund collects about $20,000 a month, he said.

B. Dale Davis has moved up from managing editor to executive editor of The Philadelphia Bulletin, succeeding George R. Packard, who resigned. Mr. Davis joined the paper in 1963 after 18 years with the Knight Newspapers, finally as assistant managing editor of The Detroit Free Press. Mr. Packard said that he was considering several offers but would first "think and read and write before making my next decision."