

Notes on People by Laurie Johnston

According to her friends Rose Mary Woods, the secretary first hired by Richard M. Nixon in 1951, has been left bitter, humiliated and angry by her moves from the White House to his "hideaway" in the Executive Office Building and now to the small Lafayette Square house allotted for the terminal business of former Presidents.

Although Miss Woods grants no interviews, a report in the current McCall's magazine says she kept Mr. Nixon's "hideway" office like a shrine until most of the contents were crated in February. Friends say she is "rancorous about the treatment she and Nixon are getting from the Ford people."
