

---

Julie Nixon Eisenhower, TV Star?

By Maxine Cheshire

---

VIP

---

Former President Richard M. Nixon has been trying to help his daughter, Julie Nixon Eisenhower, fulfill her ambition to become a television star. Nixon recently asked his agent, Irving (Swifty) Lazar, for advice. Lazar has lined her up with a good video agent, International Creative Management.

With NBC and two independent producers bidding, Nixon's own television deal for his memoirs is expected to be completed this week. He will receive "at least as much ($300,000) as Lyndon Johnson got," Lazar says. But the rights will be sold with one restriction. They cannot be shown until after the 1976 election.

When Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis heard Anthony Quinn was going to play the late Aristotle Onassis in the film "Tycoon," she telephoned him to say: "I hope it's not one of those J-

---

from Maxine Cheshire column:

Former Atty. Gen. John Mitchell may not be planning to acquire a financial interest in the Fairfax Hotel's Jockey Club and Sea Catch restaurants, but he has taken an interest in their finances.

Mitchell, who has been seeing a lot of the owner, Mary Gore Dean, since his separation from Martha, was spotted one night recently sitting on a barstool, going over the books . . . Like many tee-totaling former alcoholics, Rep. Wilbur Mills is now trying to get all his friends to spurn demon rum. "Going to his office now is like going to a WCTU meeting," one Arkansas newsman says.

©1975. The Washington Post and
The Los Angeles Times Syndicate

---