Dean, Krogh et al: Where are they now?

One year after Nixon's resignation and more than three years after Watergate began, many who figured in the scandals still are leading lives shaped strongly by Watergate:

JOHN DEAN — The former White House counsel, first major figure to testify against Nixon, is living quietly in Los Angeles, working on a book and overseeing finishing touches on his new house.

JAMES McCORD — Released from prison last month, Watergate burglar and former CIA agent McCord is living quietly in Rockville, Md., hoping to embark this fall on a speaking tour, mainly on college campuses.

E. HOWARD HUNT — Former CIA-man Hunt, who recently sold his home in Potomac, Md., and bought a condominium in Miami, is serving a sentence of 30 months to eight years at Eglin Air Force Base, Florida.

G. GORDON LIDDY — The silent man of Watergate, Liddy is serving up to 20 years at federal prison, Danbury, Conn.

JEB STUART MAGRUDER — Former Nixon campaign official Magruder is planning to move to Colorado Springs, where he already has started working with a Christian youth group. "You might say he's dropping out of politics," says his lawyer, James Bierbower.

EGIL KROGH — A member of the secret White House plumbers unit, Krogh now works on Capitol Hill for Republican California Rep. Paul McCloskey.

ROBERT MARDIAN — Former Assistant Attorney General Mardian, convicted in the cover-up case, is working for his family construction company in Phoenix, awaiting the outcome of his appeal.

ALEXANDER BUTTERFIELD — The former White House aide who revealed the existence of Nixon's taping system was fired by President Ford as head of the Federal Aviation Administration and currently is unemployed.

FRED LaRUE — The former White House aide who handled Watergate hush money is nearing the end of a six-month term at a federal detention center in Montgomery, Ala.

RICHARD KLEINDIENST — The former attorney general is practicing law in Washington and is appealing a one-year suspension from the bar for having failed to testify truthfully before a congressional committee.

CHARLES COLSON — Still active in religious work since his celebrated turn to Christ, former White House "tough guy" Colson is living quietly in suburban Virginia and writing a book.

MENNETH PARKINSON — Acquitted in the cover-up trial, Parkinson is back practicing law in Washington.

DWIGHT CHAPIN — Chapin, Nixon's former White House appointments secretary, is scheduled to start serving a minimum prison term of 10 months at Lompoc, Calif. He is to report today, one year and one day after Nixon left office.
