Martha Mitchell, suffering from a rare malignant blood disease, was operated on last week at the Hospital for Special Surgery in New York City, but her family refuses to disclose the reason for the operation.

"She is doing as well as can be expected," says her son, Jay Jennings, "but she has asked that I keep her confidence and I must. It is a very difficult time."

Jacqueline Kennedy Onassis, in Washington for the recent fund-raiser at Kennedy Center, stayed over for a meeting the next day of the advisory board in a private Senate chamber. Joan Kennedy, who ducked out the night before, showed up to see the site plan for the Kennedy Memorial University of Boston's who is on Monday
