Actor Richard Attenborough, whose specialty in war movies was the scared kid who dies a hero, is now a Sir.

Today a director as well as an actor, 52-year-old Attenborough was knighted in Queen Elizabeth's New Year's honors list.

Also "knighted" was opera singer Janet Baker, who becomes Dame Janet. Some of the other 742 Britons honored include novelist Iris Murdoch, mountaineer Chris Bonington, cellist Jacqueline du Pre and TV actor Harry H. Corbett, whose junkman role in "Steptoe and Son" was the prototype for Redd Foxx's Sanford.

ban, advertising director Richard Tullar has announced. He cited "changing attitudes" among readers, some of whom felt the policy was a form of censorship.

Two Soviet children, apparently switched by accident in a Moldavian nursing home 13 years ago, have now been placed in an orphanage while courts try to untangle the situation.

On June 12, 1963, blonde Ksenia Tanasov and swarthy Maria Zaldo gave birth to boys; Mrs. Tanasov was given a dark-skinned baby whom she named Valery, and Mrs. Zaldo was given a fair-skinned baby whom she named Sergei.

Three years ago the mixup was revealed when both boys were entered in the same school. The senior Tanasov, who is far more economically secure than his counterpart, tried to take Sergei through lawsuits and, failing that, by kidnapping him.

The Moldavian Supreme Court finally put the boys in an orphanage until they are old enough to choose which parents they want. Which means that both sets of parents visit blonde Sergei, whom they claim as theirs, and no one visits dark-haired Valery. The case was reported in the Moscow Literary Gazette.

Yugoslavia's Marshal Tito whooped the whole night through on New Year's Eve, throwing confetti and smoking a big cigar. They got him to bed at 6 a.m. He's 83.

Looking more like Brendan Behan than his old self, an overweight Elvis Presley swiveled his hips so hard in a New Year's Eve show at Pontiac, Mich., that he split his pants. He had to stop the show to change.
