

A.C.L.U. FEARS SNAGS IN CURBING SPYING

NYTimes JAN 6 1976

WASHINGTON, Jan. 5 (UPI)

— The American Civil Liberties Union said today that it would be more difficult to control the nation's intelligence agencies than it was to get Richard M. Nixon out of the White House.

"The end of the Nixon Presidency was regarded by most Americans as a return to normal times," said Aryeh Neier, A.C.L.U. executive director. "The end of the national security state will require a new sense of what is normal." "Perceived optimistically," he added, "(1975) could be the beginning of the end" for such a state.

Mr. Neier gave this assessment in an introduction to the union's annual report that showed the libertarian organization was involved in about 6,000 court cases in 1975 and received more than $4 million in contributions from its 275,000 members.

Mr. Neier also said that there was a need to break down racial barriers, citing school segregation as "the most obvious example of the failure to secure equality for blacks."

"When the South resisted integration," he added, "the North offered moral and legal leadership and — with difficulty — forced the South to give blacks equal rights. Now that the North is resisting school integration, there is no one offering moral leadership . . . not the Supreme Court . . . not the Congress . . . not the President, who encourages resistance to integration."
